DETAILED ACTION

1. The amendment filed December 28, 2004 is objected to under 35 U.S.C. 132 because it introduces new matter into the disclosure. 35 U.S.C. 132 states that no amendment shall introduce new matter into the disclosure of the invention. The added material which is not supported by the original disclosure is as follows: "The distal shaft portion has a first stiffness and then a second stiffness at the position of the stent, or intravascular device, on the shaft. The stent is relatively stiffer than the relatively flexible catheter shafts 43 and 45 and so the second stiffness will be greater than the first stiffness".

Applicant is required to cancel the new matter in the reply to this Office Action.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(a) the invention was known or used by others in this country, or patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country, before the invention thereof by the applicant for a patent.

3. Claims 1-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(a) as being anticipated by WO 01/34240 to Hancock et al.

Hancock discloses a vascular catheter comprising: An elongated tubular member (member 148) with a proximal shaft portion and a distal shaft portion, the distal shaft portion has a first stiffness (page 21 lines 15-26); an intravascular device on the distal shaft portion (stent 34, member 28), the distal shaft portion has a second stiffness at the intravascular device position, the second stiffness is greater than the first stiffness and a transition member on the distal shaft portion bridging the first stiffness and second stiffness

Art Unit: 3731

(Page 9 lines 5-14), the transition member having a third stiffness intermediate the first stiffness and the second stiffness (sleeves 163 and 166). Hancock discloses that the transition member comprises a tubular member (sleeves 163 and 166). Hancock discloses that the transition member is positioned on the distal shaft section on at least one side of the intravascular device (FIG. 6B). Hancock discloses that the transition member is positioned on the distal shaft section on both sides of the intravascular device (FIG. 6B). Hancock discloses that the transition member comprises a radiopaque marker (Page 22 lines 18-25).

Response to Arguments

4. Applicant's arguments filed December 28, 2004 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

5. Applicant argues that Hancock et al. do not disclose the specific stiffness of the transition member. A transition member would inherently have to have an intermediate stiffness. In addition, Hancock does disclose that the stiffness decreases in the distal direction (Page 9 lines, 5-28). The transition member would thus have to have an intermediate stiffness than the stiffness of the shaft sections on either side of the transitioning sleeve. Therefore, the rejection over Hancock et al. is proper.

Conclusion

6. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.

Art Unit: 3731
